

Confirmation

Surely, I have found my purpose in this human experience called life.

I affirm so, having met my new wife.

She is the evidence of the existence of the power that I have faith in.

She is the proof, that I yet have favor with them.

She is the seal, that confirms that my labor hasn't been in vain.

She is the bright and morning star.

She is the Lilly of the valley.

She is the Rose, of Sharon.

She is the Queen of the Nile.

She is the daughter of Isis.

She is, Cleopatra incarnate.

Surely I have loved her before now.

Surely, I have known and tasted her bosom before now.

A time before.

She completes me.

Her warm smile inspires me.

Her tender touch excites me.

Her voice soothes my pain.

Her body nourishes mine.

She has been endowed with a wealth of supernatural healing powers.

She was created to nurture.

She was created to love.

She has been fashioned to perfection.

She is perfection personified.

Her curves simply ignite my passions.

I long to spend hours in front of the fire place with her, caressing her shoulders and her pretty feet. And massaging them with sensual oils.

Her eyes are as jewels sparkling from a pretty box, which is her lovely face.

A face so delicate and so pure.

Her lips. Oh! Her lips.

I know now that I can love again; surly I've found true love.

She is the phoenix arisen.

She has overcome trials and tribulations by faith and by sharing her innate love for all. While using her love as the antidote for despair and disappointment.

She is the Lotus flower; flourishing in the midst of adversity.

She is my Queen.

She is my gift.

She is my blessing.

She is my lover; she is my wife.

She is my woman.

She is my flower to cultivate and to nurture and to love.

I have only scratched the surface of the depths of her love. I know that I am fortunate to have been assigned and afforded the opportunity to evoke the flowing rivers of her nectar. To provide her with ultimate satisfaction and pleasures, for-ever.
