

Love Beareth All

You say you are tired, you are headed for more fatigue. And possibly illness, from burnout. You are not your best, and angry. You resist the things that I would do for you, the little things, that you know you need, but deny. You resist the knowledge that our children are missing out on the beauty and blessing of a full family. You resist GODs calling you. You resist the help, that I want to be to you, and our children. For the sake of your own fears and stubbornness. You deny that our children are missing the wholeness, of a family. It is Winter, and we should be together as a family. To strengthen each other. To build each other. Yet, I continue to Love you. Love Bears all things. Love conquers all. Love is patient, Love is kind. Love is long suffering. Perfect Love casts out all fear. Love never fails.

Meanwhile, I continue to pray for you, and for us, patiently. It isn't dissolution, but Faith. Faith is a person that I know. So I bend my knees, to bend the Universe. All things are possible with GOD, in the supernatural. And with Faith. I will yet believe, and pray and meditate. As I know the power that exist in being faithful. And walking in Love. Love Bears All. As I pray continually that you will humble yourself before him, and return to him. And come to your senses, like the prodigal Son. I pray you will also return to your family, for your family's sake.

Copyright © 2019 LeMay Imagery Publishing