

There are times

There are times in your life when you're not sure about anything.

There are times when you just need an answer.

There are times when you need someone to answer your prayers.

There are times when someone comes along, and they appear to be the answer to your prayers.

There are times when you want to let your guard down.

There are times when all that you have loved seems to have faded away.

Then there are times when it seems that the air blows the ashes of your broken life, back at you.

And there are times when it feels so right, and you know that the storm is over.

And then you know that you can love again.

And then you know that it is time to move forward, again.

And then you believe in yourself and your potential, again.

Then you know that your pain is over.

Then you know that your healing is in the bosom of your lover.

Thank you for being her.

Copyright © 2019 LeMay Imagery Publishing